MAJ. BEN F. SIMPSON DEAD

Pioneer Paola Man Helped to Draft the Wyandotte Constitution in the Early Days.

With the death at Paola recently of Maj. Benjamin F. Simpson, the last link in the official chain that binds the Kansas of today with territorial Kansas was broken. Major Simpson, then 23 years old, sat in the Wyandotte Convention and helped draft the constitution under which admitto the Union was obtained. S. E. Hoffman in St. Louis is the only living member of the convention.

Major Simpson, known more intimately to Kansans and G. A. R. veterans as "Ben," was born in Belmont county, Ohio, in 1836. After getting license to practice law in Ohio in 1857 he came to Kansas and had since lived here. His friend with whom he made the trip into Kansas was Wilson Shannon, second territorial governor. There was not a railroad in Kansas then.

Two years after he had moved here. he was chosen a delegate to the Wyan dotte convention. He was its youngest member. When Kansas became a state, he was elected attorney general, but resigned in July, 1861, to enlist with the United States army. He served as captain and major of cavalry. Soon after being mustered out in October, 1865, he was elected to the state senate.

Major Simpson was sent to the legislature in 1870 and was speaker of the house in 1871. Later he was appointed to the commission to revise the statutes of the state. In 1878 he was appointed United States marshal by President Hayes.

SAY THEIR HANDS ARE TIED

State Officials Declare Their Inability to Prevent Proposed Boost in Natural Gas Prices.

The hands of the state of Kansas are tied so well that not a move can be made to stop the hike in the gas rates. The United States courts did such a good job in spreading injunction orders around that the receiver for the Kansas Natural Gas Company can order dollar natural gas if he wants to, and get away with it. After a conference between Governor Capper and S. M. Brewster, attorney general, the conclusion reached was that Kansas would have to sit down and hold its hands while the Kansas Natural takes whatever money and other valuables it may find.

The federal court granted permission to the Kansas Natural to charge thirty-five cents a thousand feet for gas. The court said that not less than this sum should be collected. The Kansas Natural is taking care to see that rates do not get as low as the minimum, for reports from a large number of cities served showed rates of thirty-five to forty cents.

Along with this rate order was an injunction against all the state officials prohibiting them interfering with the rates fixed by the receiver. There is no review or no official sanction to the rates.

"The price increase is an outrage," Governor Capper said. "The order that the minimum monthly bill should be $1 is even worse. I wish there were some way to stop it, but it
